EDISON
HOME HEALTH CARE

What is home health care?

Many people who require ongoing care prefer to remain in a community setting. Home care enables them to achieve this by addressing their health and personal needs within the comfort of their own homes.

Home care is usually separated into two categories – skilled care and personal care. Skilled care addresses a patient's medical needs and includes services such as nursing, physical and occupational therapy, etc. Personal care is provided to assist a patient with activities of daily living (ADLs). Examples of personal care include dressing, bathing, and meal preparation.

Why Edison Home Health Care?

Edison Home Health Care has established itself as a leader in the field of home care in the areas of communication and customer satisfaction. We offer an unprecedented array of services all geared towards keeping our clients healthy, happy and in the know.

When you first come on service with Edison, you will be assigned a dedicated care coordinator that will see to your every need. Special requests are our specialty. Our staff members speak many languages so you can be sure that we have someone who can help you.

Need help with a Medicaid application or filing a long-term care insurance claim? Our in-house consulting division will guide you every step of the way.

This is a different kind of home health care. This is Edison Home Health Care.
